

Benevolence

Jesus said as you have done unto the least of these you have done unto me today there are thousands of citizens in DFW that would qualify as these least today there are those in rest homes, hospitals and jails that desire a visitor today there are those who lack basic food, clothes and shelter today there those who want tutors to help them to read and write today there are those who want help to learn how speak English today there are meals-on-wheels programs that need drivers today there are those whose house burned down last month that are readjusting today there are military personnel that would appreciate a friendly letter today there are students at risk of flunking out that need a volunteer tutor today there are those in crisis pregnancy centers that need volunteer counselors today there are those in midnight basketball leagues that need volunteer referees today there are those in half way houses that do not want to return to the gang today there are single moms that cannot afford to buy school supplies today there are elderly widows that need some yard work done for free today there are empty phones waiting for volunteer counselors today there are missionaries on furlough here that have a wide range of needs today there are food banks that need volunteers to screen the clients today there are sliding scale clinics that need helpers of all kinds today there are blind and handicapped residents that need practical helps today there are international college students that want to befriend Americans today there are teens online that are asking spiritual questions today there are churches in the inner city that need basic resources today there are lonely seniors that need a phone call weekly today there are soup kitchens that need volunteers to clean the pots today there are families at the hospices that need comfort and encouragement
